"What The World Thinks"

As part of their ongoing campaign of anti-Americanism, the BBC recently presented a programme based on a worldwide poll of attitudes to the USA.

(Incidentally, in their trailers for this abomination, they happened to say something true: "It's time to hear what The World thinks."

OK we're kidding. The capitalisation of the link in the quote is ours. Here is the full context. Notice how the American flag casts an ominous shadow across the world as it passes overhead.)

Anyway, the poll was a pointless exercise. We already know what 'the world' (in that sense) thinks: it thinks that it would be a much better place if more aircraft were to hit American buildings. There is neither authority nor wisdom in this opinion, just spite.
